ARTIST STATEMENT

In my artworks, flesh and body have more than just a physical dimension, they are part of a new, ever-changing model of my reality. It is the result of my own worldview changes, self-improvement, search, and reaction to the deformation of the world.

I analyze the present and the past, compare and search for common ground. I convey these similarities and differences on the canvas, sometimes they recreate the future.

After the full-scale war started, I didn't change the main topics of my art practice. I was already working with themes of dialogues, roots of traditions, the nature of cruelty, and memory. I chose these topics a long time ago as a lifetime's research. Now they are more relevant than ever.
